The Women's Studies programmes are designed to offer a variety of views about women in private and social roles. Courses in the programmes (Minor, Major and Certificate) include such concerns as Women in the Arts, Literature, History, and selected societal institutions such as the family. The aims of the programmes are to introduce the students to the study of women, to afford a background to those who will work with women in public occupations, and to stimulate further thought and research in the field.

ENGL C249/2 . WOMEN IN LITERATURE I

(3 credits)

TAUGHT BY: Prof. A. Bruné, SGW

Mon. 16:05 - 17:55 (Section AA)

PREREQUISITE: None

TYPE OF COURSE: Elective

SPECIAL TOPIC: Navigations: Secular and Celestial

CONTENT: In speaking to our imagination, literature speaks to our freedom. It often confronts us with possibilities and consequences we may not have thought of, or not have thought of fully, and it invites us to new insights, new feelings, new judgements, and even new visions of reality.

I have chosen six English, American, and Canadian women authors, masters of the short-story form, who have the capacity to successfully address us in this way. We shall be reading from among the works of:

Katherine Mansfield Joyce Carol Oates Flannery O'Connor Tillie Olsen Katherine Ann Porter Eudora Welty

One choice play, perhaps the best Canadian play ever written, Sharon Pollock's Blood Relations will be critically evaluated by us.

I also look forward to ongoing discussions about the relationship of literary criticism to ideology, of ideology to truth, and of art to politics.

One critical paper of about 2,200 words and your active engagement in the course are the formal requirements.

ENGL C249/2

WOMEN IN LITERATURE I

(3 credits)

TAUGHT BY:

K. Waters, Loy TTh 10:15 - 11:30 (Section 01)

PREREQUISITE: None

TYPE OF COURSE: Elective

CONTENT: Through short stories, poems and plays, the image and the reality of women as young girls, lovers, mothers, wives, single women, workers and artists will be studied. While a few texts will be from earlier centuries, emphasis will be on the representation of these images and realities from the late nineteenth century to the present. The social and psychological bases of these images, and their effect on women's lives, will be discussed.

Although there will be some works by male writers whose literary depiction of women has been influential (such as Ibsen, Fitzgerald and D.H. Lawrence), the focus will be upon the way in which female writers (such as Aphra Behn, Dickinson, Mansfield, Woolf, Plath, Livesay, Lessing, Sexton, Munro, Atwood, and Adrienne Rich) have expressed dimensions of women's experiences which have been ignored, and possibilities of new self-definition, relationships and choices.

Through analysis in class and short, text-oriented written assignments, the course also aims at increasing understanding of how such literary elements as image, structure and diction convey a writer's imaginative vision.

REQUIRED TEXTS:

Munro, Alice

Lessing, Doris

A Man and Two Women

Cahill, Susan, ed.

Erskine & Warren, ed.

Short Story Masterpieces

Three Plays (Dell edition)

Waters, ed.

Anthology: Women in Literature (poems and stories)

Readings will also be required from works which will include the following:

de Beauvoir, Simone Wolf, Virginia Rich, Adrienne

The Second Sex

A Room of One's Own

Of Woman Born: Mother

Of Woman Born: Motherhood as Experience and Institution

ENGL C250/4 WOMEN IN LITERATURE II

(3 credits)

TAUGHT BY: Prof. A. Bruné, SGW

Mon. 16:05 - 17:55 (Sec. AA)

PREREQUISITE: ENGL C249 or a course which has stressed the novel as form.

TYPE OF COURSE: Elective

SPECIAL TOPIC: Navigations: Secular and Celestial

CONTENT: In speaking to our imagination literature speaks to our freedom. It confronts us with possibilities and consequences we may not have thought of, or not have thought of fully, and it invites us to new insights, new feelings, new judgements and even new visions of reality.

I have chosen four novels of fine quality, written by women, with women protagonists, which have the capacity to successfully address us in this way. Some of these novels while giving due recognition to the negative sociological, psychological, and cultural dimensions of character and situation, also affirm the resilience, resistance, and creativity of the heroine. These are novels of at least modest optimism. These are heroines who are navigators. What they navigate from, why they navigate at all, what they navigate towards, and by what means, will be one of the central themes around which the course will be organized. Others of these travels are about failed journeys, tragic journeys, perhaps even journeys that should never have been taken. They also instruct us, telling us of shoals and treacherous deeps.

We will navigate the text also, by charting the relationship between character, action, theme, and symbol.

TEXTS:

Chopin, Kate. The Awakening
Woolf, Virgina. To the Lighthouse
Laurence, Margaret. The Stone Angel
Stead, Christina. Miss Herbert

One critical paper of about 2,200 words and your active engagement in the course are the formal requirements.

Your paper is to be chosen from among the following texts:

ENGL C250/4 WOMEN IN LITERATURE II

(3 credits)

TAUGHT BY:

K. Waters, Loy
TTh 10:15 - 11:30 (Sec. 01)

PREREQUISITE: ENGL C249 or a course which has stressed the novel

as form.

TYPE OF COURSE: Elective

CONTENT: This course will examine the social and psychological factors which form the consciousness of the female characters in a selection of novels by women. The effect of gender definition, sex role and prevailing ideology in any given period upon the self-concepts, personal relationships and life options of girls and women will be explored. We shall also study the way in which each author uses language, imagery and fictional structures such as plot and narrative perspective to embody consciousness. Six or seven novels will be selected from the following list:

Wollstonecraft The Wrongs of Women

Austen Emma Bronte Villette

Woolf To the Lighthouse Smedlev Daughter of Earth Ostenso

Wild Geese Plath The Bell Jar Atwood Surfacing

The Woman Warrior Kingston The True Story of Ida Johnson

The Realms of Gold Drabble

ENGL C251/2 SELECTED TOPICS IN LITERATURE WRITTEN BY WOMEN I

(3 credits)

TAUGHT BY: R. Belkin, SGW

Tues. 18:05 - 20:10 (Sec. AA)

PRFREQUISITE: None

TYPE OF COURSE: Elective

SPECIAL TOPIC: The Voice of Women in Nineteenth-Century Fiction.

CONTENT: The course will examine the ways in which the great women writers of the nineteenth century have used the conventions of the novel to depict the lives of their contemporaries, both male and female. In the process of analysis, those literary conventions which have been influential in shaping the lives of women in nineteenth-century fiction will undergo special scrutiny as will some interpretations by well-known critics.

The novels to be studied are:

Austen, Jane Pride and Prejudice

Bronte, Charlotte Jane Eyre

Eliot, George Adam Bede

Daniel Deronda

ENGL C252/4

SELECTED TOPICS IN LITERATURE WRITTEN BY WOMEN II

(3 credits)

TAUGHT BY:

R. Belkin, SGW Tues. 18:05 - 20:10 (Sec. AA)

PREREQUISITE: None

TYPE OF COURSE: Elective

SPECIAL TOPIC: The Voice of Women in Twentieth-Century Fiction.

CONTENT: The course will examine the ways in which great women writers of our time have used fictional forms to portray the lives of their contemporaries.

Since a three-credit course on 20th-century women writers, must, of necessity, be restricted to a representative sample, the reading list below is unified by several major themes. Most of the works to be studied, have, as their protagnonists, women writers or artists. Another recurring theme is that of relationships between mothers and daughters (an important contrast to the father-and-sone or mother-and-son emphasis which informs so many major works of literature). Also, since the major characters in these works are all women, the traditional literary quest for meaning focuses on the particular question: "What does this woman's life mean?"

The novels to be studied are:

Woolf, Virginia

To the Lighthouse

Olsen, Tillie

Tell me a Riddle

Lessing, Doris

A Man and Two Women

Laurence, Margaret

The Diviners

STATUS OF WOMEN IN CROSS-CULTURAL ANTH C397/4 PERSPECTIVE I

(3 credits)

TAUGHT BY: A. Joy, SGW
TTh, 14:45 - 16:00 (Section A)

PREREQUISITE: ANTH C211 (Introduction) or equivalent, or permission of the instructor.

This course is designed to study the status of women cross-culturally. It focuses on hunting, as well as horticultural peoples in areas such as native North and South America, Africa, Australia and Asia. We will ascertain whether among these societies there are some, unlike our own, in which women are publicly recognized as equal to or more powerful than men. We will discuss how the differences in status may be explained and what are the implications in the present search for equal social status for men and women.

EVALUATION: Students are expected to attend class meetings regularly, to keep up with reading assignments, and to take part in class discussions. Evaluations will likely be based upon inclass presentations and/or other forms of assessment such as takehome assignments or term papers.

TYPE OF COURSE:

SPECIAL TOPIC: Woman's Lot

CONTENT: This course explores the relationship between literature and feminism by assessing the connection between evolving literary techniques, themes, and visions of reality, and some of the social and cultural changes advocated, or attained, by feminism in its "second wave" manifestations.

In our novels, together with a thematic emphasis, we shall be particularly concerned with the evolving characterization of the heroine, including an analysis of the heroine in a politically messianic or in a prophetic role. For example, we shall do a close reading of Lessing's, Memoirs of a Survivor. Indeed, we shall even pursue the messianic prophetic image of woman into the hitherto male terrain of science fiction and the detective story. We shall be reading Ursula Le Guin's, Left Hand of Darkness, or her, The Word for World is Forest; and we shall certainly read the elegant and witty detective novel, Death In a Tenured Position, by Amanda Cross.

he rest of our novels, as listed below, are all substantial contemporary works by raking women writers, which explore women's changing self-conceptions and social roles in a changing world.

One thing must be said and that is this: despite the emphasis of this course we shall not forego formal close critical analysis of the major novels. Close textual analysis is essential because the analysis of the social context while establishing a measure of causality and human value for the work, cannot alone fully tell us what the work means or how to evaluate the work as a work of art.

We shall attempt a lot. We shall try to look at woman's lot. Her situation. Her chances. Her amplitude.

We shall closely analyze 6 out of 7 following novels:

Lady Oracle
The Milstone
Miss Herbert
Realms of Gold
The Summer Before the Dark
The Golden Notebook
Memoirs of a Survivor

Margaret Atwood Margaret Drabble Christina Stead Margaret Drabble Doris Lessing Doris Lessing Doris Lessing

THE FEMINIST TRADITION IN SOCIOLOGY

(3 credits)

TAUGHT BY: S. Hoecker-Drysdale, Loy. Tues. 18:05 - 20:10

(Section 51)

Feminist social analysis has a long history but a truncated tradition. The sociological understanding of the status and condition of women in society clearly emerges in the eighteenth century with Wollstonecraft, Von Hippel and Condorcet.

These feminist or nonsexist treatises generate a rather consistent stream of social critiques and feminist analyses throughout the nineteenth and twentieth century which, for reasons to be considered in the course of study, were denied their deserved places in the emerging field of sociology. An important tradition, that of feminist sociology, is explored and understood, in terms of its historical integrity which was continually subverted by the more powerful chauvinist tradition.

The course of study will involve the examination of selected sociological writings from the eighteenth to the late twentieth centuries which investigate and understand the position of women in society from a nonsexist perspective. The question of the existence of a demonstrable tradition or of the appearance of singular and disparate writings will be considered. The goal is to understand that the boundaries of the sociological tradition as currently defined are spurious.

Some of the writings selected will be by:

Von Hippel, Wollstonecraft, Condorcet, J.S. Mill & Harriet Taylor, Bachofen, Martineau, Comte, de Tocquevill, Bebel, Marx, Engels, Tristan, B. Webb, Goldman, Kollantai, Zetkin, Luxemburg, Addams, Kelley, Key, Gilman, Schreiner, Veblen, Thomas, Ward, Beard, D.S. Thomas, Benedict, Mead, Myrdale, Klein, Weber, Simmel, Mannheim, Durkheim, and selections from recent sociologists; Friedan, Dixon, Mitchell, Firestone, Oakley, Eichler, Rossi, Bernard, Lopata, D. Smith, etc.
